The War in Spain

Today International News Service will begin daily presentation in the Courier of one of the most dramatic and colorful narratives that has yet come out of war-torn Spain—the "war log" of H. R. Knickerbocker, the famous roving correspondent and Pulitzer prize winner who has been on the firing line since the revolt broke out two months ago.

These pages from a war correspondent's note-book tell a stark, unvarnished story of the bloodiest civil war of modern times—a story written under fire, in the smoke of battle.

They disclose with brutal frankness the incredible horror of the sanguinary conflict that has shocked the world. They tell of events and of personalities, of battle, pillage, sacrifice, torture, arson—and heroism.

"When I say bullets," Knickerbocker writes in a letter to one of his editors, "it means lead ones, or maybe sometimes copper, or bronze, anyway they made a very funny sound when they ricochet." This is a brief hint of the contents of this amazing diary. Installments will appear each day in addition to Knickerbocker's regular cable dispatches on spot developments.

(Note: Following is the first of the war logs sent from the Spanish battlefield by H. R. Knickerbocker, famous roving correspondent of International News Service.)

LISBON, Sept. 14—(INS)—They shoot down airplanes every day in this Spanish civil war, but flying is safer than travelling by automobile. By now they have crashed about fifty airplanes but there are certainly no fewer than five hundred passenger cars and trucks careened on the roadsides of Spain with from one to one hundred and fifty bullet holes in each.

Sometimes you see a car with one bullet hole through the windshield smack over the driver's seat. That's all it took. On the other hand I saw one car still in use with one hundred and three machine gun bullets through its back and nobody hurt. The Red machine gunners were lying in the road and their bullets caught the car on an upward slant so that they practically cut the roof off but missed the occupants.

This happens often where you would think and there are scores of cars that got away, still running strong and the owners are proud of the scars. But mostly they don't get away. This happens because there is no real front in this war. Only at places like the crests of the mountains at the Col de Leon on the Guadarrama or the Somosierra are there fixed positions.

Elsewhere the front is all mixed up with columns of Whites penetrating far into Red territory while just a few hundred yards from the White column the land is no man's. After the White column passes, little bands of Reds creep down near the road and especially at dusk take pot shots at passing cars. Then too all day long on all the main roads leading to the front Madrid's airplanes patrol up and down looking for a chance to bomb or machine gun troop transports or passenger cars carrying officers.

So when we took off from the Burgos Airdrome to fly to Seville by way of Lisbon I felt actually safer than had we gone by road. Any airplane flying over Spain today is liable to be shot at by both sides because both Reds and Whites are using every variety of commercial plane and there has not been time to paint them with the all red insignia of Madrid or the orange and gold of the nationalists, or their newly-adopted black cross on a white background.

Our little plane, though, was a tiny de Havilland Leopard Moth and it looked too innocent for anybody to shoot at. But it only cruises at 110 miles per hour and has a top speed of barely 127 so it would not stand much chance if one of Madrid's new pursuit planes wanted to chase us.

The boys at the Burgos Airdrome told us to fly clear of Valladolid, the new military headquarters of the White army in the north, and of Salamanca because both these places had

CANAL COMPANY TO DECIDE STREAM'S FATE

Directors To Hold Meeting On September 24th, It Is Announced

TO TAKE ACTION

Something definite concerning the attitude of the Delaware Division Canal Company is expected to be learned after a meeting of the directors on September 24th.

This was learned a few days ago in a letter received by John Ross, Doylestown, attorney for the Delaware Valley Protective Association, from Hon. Grover C. Ladner, Deputy Attorney General, September 9th, as follows:

"Since I last wrote to you and Mr. William Francis Taylor, secretary of the Delaware Valley Protective Association, I have had several conferences with Samuel D. Matlack, representing William J. Turner, counsel for the Delaware Division Canal Company, and have made known the Commonwealth's position.

"The canal company has called a meeting of its board of directors September 24, 1936, to determine definitely whether it desires to retain the canal and restore the same to navigable condition, or whether it will surrender the entire canal to the State. If it determines upon the latter course it desires to be protected concerning certain existing railroad spurs in the region of Morrisville which have encroached into the bed of the canal.

"Whatever proposal is decided upon this department and the Department of Forests and Waters would before coming to any agreement invite the views of the public-spirited organizations concerning the equitableness of such an arrangement.

"Accordingly, as some proposal of the canal company is likely to be made to the State within the near future, it might be well if you and Mr. Taylor would organize a committee from among the various associations interested, with whom any proposal that is submitted might be discussed. I would suggest that you confer with Mr. Taylor, and with Honorable Morris L. Cooke, to each of whom I am sending a copy of this communication relative to the formation of such a committee."

Trotto-Di Lissio Wedding
Occurs in Local Church

A pretty wedding took place Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church, when Miss Louise DiLissio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dominick DiLissio, 1027 Wood street, became the bride of Joseph Trotto, son of Phillip Trotto, Lafayette street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Marcellino Romagnolo. Miss Frances Tamburella, Dorrance street, played the wedding march. Miss Mary Madden, Buckley street, sang "Because."

The maid of honor was Miss Rose DeLissio, sister of the bride; and the bridesmaid was Miss Josephine Mosco, 447 Washington street, a niece of the groom. The best man was Nicholas DiLissio, brother of the bride.

The bride was gowned in white satin. The bridal veil was of tulle, and the headpiece trimmed with satin and orange blossoms. Her sandals were white satin and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor and the bridesmaid wore gowns fashioned alike. Miss DeLissio was attired in coral transparent velvet and Miss Mosco wore aquamarine transparent velvet. Their slippers and velvet turbans trimmed with maline, matched their gowns. Miss DeLissio carried roses blending with the dress, and Miss Mosco carried yellow roses.

A reception was held at the home of the bride. The couple left Sunday evening for a three day motor trip through the Pocono Mountains. They will reside with the bride's parents.

THE LANDON METHOD

(New York American, September 8, 1936)

Governor Alfred M. Landon's effective handling of the drought situation in Kansas gives an insight into his character and his method.

It is his habit always to "follow through."

This is well illustrated by his negotiations to get the railroads to make special concessions to the drought victims. Nearly a month ago Mr. Landon was popularly credited with inducing the rail carriers to transport feeds at two-thirds of the regular rates for drought victims.

But Mr. Landon was not interested in dramatizing himself. He had the administrative zeal to follow up the transaction, and make sure that it was MORE than a PAPER VICTORY.

He discovered that the railroads had cut rates on drought traffic passing over their own individual lines, but HAD NEGLECTED TO DO SO ON JOINT TRAFFIC PASSING OVER MORE THAN A SINGLE RAILROAD.

This lack discriminated against farmers shipping over several lines.

Accordingly, Governor Landon telegraphed officials of the ten railroads entering Kansas, asking them to establish JOINT EMERGENCY RATES for shipments of cattle and feed.

And the Governor did not ask this in the name of a charitable handout to the distressed farmers.

He got to the heart of the matter by reminding the railroads:

"Saving foundation herds means saving future shippers for railroads."

The people of Kansas herald Mr. Landon as a man who gets things done.

He works quietly and effectively.

His technique has succeeded in Kansas.

It will also be fruitful at Washington.

The chaos resulting from having in the White House a man of the PROMOTER TYPE, who lacks the infinite patience for following up public matters, will give way to order, calmness and increasing national prosperity.

GRAYS UPSET DOPE
AND TROUCE REDS

Carnvale Scores On An Intercepted Pass; Reds Out-play the Grays

FUMBLES WERE COSTLY

By Louis Tomlinson

Phil Carnvale intercepted a pass on his own 40 yard line and then proceeded to run the full 60 yards for a touchdown as his team defeated a favored Red eleven to upset the dope in the annual Red and Gray game played on the school field Saturday morning. The final score was 12-0. Midway in the first quarter Harry Barroth faded back and threw a pass intended for Jack Londer. Carnvale came over fast to grab the aerial and galloped to touchdown land behind excellent interference. Barroth made a gallant effort to stop the fleet end but missed on the ten yard line. Phil then scored unopposed. This play greatly upset the Red team who never fully recovered, hence they went down to defeat.

The ultimate victors added a superfluous touchdown in the third quarter to sew up the battle. This score was the result of a couple of fumbles by a Red back early in the third period. Collier kicked from his 35 and Orazi fumbled it with Profy and Sanes recovering for the Grays on the Red 43.

Striking Coincidence

(By "The Stroller")

Last night Michael Whalen, a former Bristol man, was seen in "White Fang," a great mystery story from the pen of Jack London, by those who attended the performance at the Grand Theatre, here.

A rather striking coincidence, I am told, is that Jack London, author of the picture in which Whalen was starred, was once arrested in Bristol at Mill and Pond streets, where the Grand Theatre is located.

My informant states that London was riding the freight trains as a tramp so as to get color for his famous stories. The late Charles Saxton, chief of police, here, at that time, arrested London and put him behind the bars in the old Town Hall, Radcliffe and Market streets. Then London revealed his identity and Chief Saxton at once set him free.

Therefore, we have a former Bristol man being starred in a picture taken from a story written by a man who was arrested on the very corner on which is located the theatre in which the picture was shown.

LANGHORNE, Sept. 14—The ways and means committee of the Middletown Grange announces that a booster meeting will be held in the Edgewood House at Woodside on Thursday evening, October 1.

Plans for this meeting, which will include the Philadelphia, Middletown, Delaware Valley, and Edgewood granges, are already under way. It was stated at the meeting that the booster session will be open to persons interested in grange and agricultural activities.

At the meeting on Wednesday a report of the recent meeting of the Lower Bucks and Philadelphia Pomona Grange No. 22, which was held at Carversville, was heard. The report was made to the members by one of the delegates to that convention, Mrs. Jesse Webster.

Final plans were also made on Wednesday for the local grange exhibit at the coming Doylestown Fair. The lecturer's program centered on the harvest theme and several poems were read pertaining to the opening of school in this section. Hannah Hibbs, Georgianna Thompson and R. Walker Jackson participated in this part of the program.

The master, Henry C. Pickering, explained several points in the grange ritual. The next meeting of the grange is scheduled to take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnson, Langhorne Borough, on September 23. The program for that meeting has not as yet been announced.

AND NO ONE WANTS WAR

Twenty-two years after outbreak of the greatest war in history, European dispatches portray a dark scene: "An armament race, mutual suspicions and hatreds and failure of efforts of collective security and peace have brought about a situation which most statesmen declare is worse than that which plunged Europe into war in August, 1914."

There is plenty to substantiate the statesmen's pessimism. There is no country in Europe which is not under the shadow of war fear. Possible provocations for war, potential spots for war's outbreak are manifold. The question "Will there be war?" has been replaced almost everywhere in Europe by the more hopeless query, "Where will war break out?"

The latest illustration of this ominous state of affairs can be found in Spain's civil war which threatens overnight to align the powers of Europe for new conflict. How easily the powder magazine might be exploded is indicated by reports of a German warship's intervention to prevent Spanish government ships from bombarding rebel forts in Morocco.

Europe is where the combustibles of war are most perilously near to ignition. But war is not exclusively a European property. For several years a gradual, inexorable war of conquest has been going on in Asia, and Africa was the scene of recent ruthless European aggression.

As for the Americas: Here in the United States, with no powerful, aggressive neighbors to menace us, we are able to enjoy a virtue of our geographical blessings and to thank God that we are not as other men are. And yet we spend a billion a year on things related to war. In South America, two small nations recently fought each other to the point of exhaustion and then gave up the contest in favor of civil strife.

So it is that a world which has learned thoroughly the lesson of 22 years ago—that war is not always the best solution and in that fact may be the best—only were the world without the barriers of modern war. The world would be a better place. The world would be a more peaceful place. The world would be a more united place. The world would be a more prosperous place. The world would be a more beautiful place. The world would be a more happy place. The world would be a more peaceful place. The world would be a more united place. The world would be a more prosperous place. The world would be a more beautiful place. The world would be a more happy place.

The lesson of the various governments about their threats of war and their plans for peace from the world's leaders. And those who have not forgotten the last war meant and who realize that another war would increase the horrors of the last a thousandfold.

The situation is typically American, too. It stands a bit of abuse before it is back.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Mar. 18, 1875. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The river, yesterday morning, was favorable for ducking. Joseph Booz and Frank Brinsford were out an hour or two, during which time they shot 15 ducks.

Rev. Tranger, ex-treasurer of Bucks County, died last Saturday, at his residence in Nockamixon, after a brief illness. He was about 63 years of age.

The new planing mill to be erected by Joseph Sherman, on Dorrance street, near the canal, will be built of stone. It will be a two-story building 44 feet front by 53 feet deep.

The Rev. J. H. Drumm, D. D., preached his farewell sermon at St. James' P. E. Church, last Sabbath. Mr. Drumm has accepted a call at New Britain, Conn., where he expects to go this week.

At about eight o'clock, last Saturday evening, the town was startled by the cry of fire followed by the clangor of the fire bell. The alarm was occasioned by the burning of a barn, hay house and wagon house, on the farm of Augustus M. Knight, situated on the Beaver Dam road near the township line. Owing to the muddy nature of the roads, which were almost impassable for such a heavy weight as the steamer, the firemen were unable to proceed with it farther than Buckley street. The American Hose Co. went by the Forge road, but being detained several minutes by a freight train watering at the station, lost valuable time. They however reached the point in time to do good service with the fire bell. The alarm was occasioned by the burning of a barn, hay house and wagon house, on the farm of Augustus M. NEWPORTVILLE — Mixed hay is now bringing in Philadelphia from 90c to $1, and pure timothy from $1 to $1.10. Six colossal horses were required to pull Squire Pette's flour wagon to Frankford on Monday last; in Bensalem five are necessary to draw a load of hay. Although wagon-wheels sunk in the mire hub-deep, some think there is several feet of frost yet in the ground, which is rather doubtful.

Rev. F. E. Church, pastor of the Methodist Church, delivered his farewell sermon last Sunday. Mr. Church does not anticipate that he will be returned to Bristol by the Conference which is now in session at Norristown.

Mrs. Mary Hillborn returned to her home on Jefferson avenue, after two weeks' visit with relatives in Annapolis, Md.

The stock was all saved with the exception of one horse, which could not be reached in time. Upon the evening of the fire, the hired man employed by Mr. Knight was down town, and meeting a tramp, offered him a night's lodging in the barn. The two proceeded to the farm house, and in a short time afterwards the barn was found to be on fire. They persistently deny any knowledge of its origin.

HULMEVILLE — Barney Clarke, an employee of the railroad, living near Schenck's station, met with a severe accident on Monday evening last. He had been to Bristol for the purpose of becoming a member of the Catholic Temperance Beneficial Society, and in returning, forgetting the cars had advanced, took the wrong track. A train struck him about nine o'clock, and he remained senseless till three in the morning, when he managed to gather sufficient strength to crawl to his home, which was not far distant. His recovery is doubtful.

John McGinley made application for the privilege of erecting a slaughterhouse on Linden street, Laingtown. The application was referred to the street committee.

new batteries of anti-aircraft guns and were anxious to try them out. On the Burgos field they were drilling with just such a battery of ten guns. On another corner of the field they were installing bomb racks in a brand new tri-motor Fokker, one of the four sent over from England.

It seems silly for the nations of Europe to go on pretending that they are not intervening in this war. Every day you can see new French machines coming over from Madrid, of a type the Reds do not have in the first weeks of war, while the sight of German and Italian machines on this side has long since ceased to attract attention.

We took off into a strong north wind that promised to blow us down to Lisbon in fast time. For ten minutes we climbed, spiraling up to 6,000 feet, out of ordinary rifle fire. Then we leveled off for Lisbon.

Below us the fields were dotted every three or four miles with groups of peasants threshing and winnowing their grain. They do it exactly as they did a thousand years ago. They lay the shocks of wheat on the ground and drive horses or mules around and over them until the grains of wheat are loosened and the straw ground to chaff. Then they toss the mixture in the air and let the wind blow the chaff away while the wheat remains.

The piles of pale yellow chaff and the mounds of golden red wheat and the black oxen and the harsh yellow ground looked peacefully beautiful. Then we passed over a huge complex of buildings covering more than a city block. High walls surrounded the buildings, with turrets at the corners. Flying directly overhead we could see two large courtyards filled with a throng of several thousand persons. It was a jail, one of many. In the Burgos jail are said to be 2,700 civilian political prisoners.

There must be a minimum of ten times that number in the territory controlled by the Whites and probably a considerably large number in that controlled by the Reds, although it is the firm conviction on this side that the Reds are holding very few prisoners but shooting them off hand. Nevertheless an estimate of 70,000 to 100,000 civilian political prisoners on both sides in this war would probably not be far wrong. This is a grown up civil war.

POCKETBOOK FACTS ABOUT YOUR TAXES

The Consumer Always Pays

No matter where taxes are levied in the process of production and distribution it is the consumer who ultimately pays.

Taxes, like wages and other expenses, must be included in the costs of the commodities the nation buys. The farmer, manufacturer, railroad, wholesaler, jobber, trucker and retailer all must recover the taxes they pay if they are to make a profit and continue in business. Consequently, although an individual consumer may never receive a tax bill, he pays hidden taxes in the retail prices of the things he buys. He is the only fellow who can't pass it along. The consumer cannot delude himself into thinking that someone else is paying the taxes. Whether the taxes be Federal, State or local, and whether levied on incomes or commodities, they are passed on and on until they reach the consumer. Every workman, every farmer, is a consumer.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XXXV

Vernon sighed again. What was there in talking?

"Anyhow"—here was a trump card—"I'm going right over the lists this afternoon with Mrs. Van Tyle, and you'll see she'll be fairly stunned by our acquaintance!"

Mrs. Van Tyle was. But not at all in the sense that poor Sadie Tyson had expected.

"Why, my dear, dear Mrs. Tyson, you've invited the oddest, strangest people!" drawled the aristocratic Katrinka Van Tyle as she surveyed the long list of names through her gold-jeweled spectacles after her arrival, at the tea hour. "Forgive me for speaking plainly, and of course I admit times have changed, and we ought all to adapt ourselves to them, and be broad-minded. But surely no debutante I have ever known—or my son either, and he's liberal enough—ever had such people at her coming-out! Why, some of them are perfectly dreadful people, dear Mrs. Tyson!"

Sadie Tyson's plump face had turned perfectly white, then scarlet. "But—but—we were advised—"

"You've been shockingly advised, if you'll forgive my bluntness, dear Mrs. Tyson! It looks to me—and I know my New York like a book—as though you'd obeyed the Biblical injunction, and gone right out to the highways and hedges! I never even heard of half these people—and almost all the remaining ones are quite socially impossible—outside the pale—dear Mrs. Tyson!"

"No class to them, you mean?" fairly panted poor Sadie. "And Martina de Bray making me think I'd the classiest names on my list! Oh, the wicked deceiver!"

Mrs. Van Tyle's lips twitched for a second, and her eyes held an amused, contemptuous gleam. It faded immediately as she said, coolly: "Surely you realized that woman was a bare-faced adventurer from the moment you met her, my dear Mrs. Tyson?"

"I didn't. We're new to these parts. When we found her out, it was too late! Oh, Mrs. Van Tyle, what'll I do? Can I cancel the invitations and send out new ones to YOUR friends? Oh, won't you help us?"

Mrs. Van Tyle smiled patronizingly. This woman was too quaint! Such ideas! Such murdering of the Van Tyle family were not so broke and it was essential for her "Toddy" to marry MONEY, she wouldn't waste another minute on these queer Tysons. . . .

"I could have helped you had I had the pleasure of meeting you before the invitations to Vernon's party were despatched, dear Mrs. Tyson. The only thing I can see for you now—provided you decide not to entertain these people, and who could blame you—is for someone to turn sick, or be called out of town—and then give the party later on."

Thus Mrs. Van Tyle aloof. Inwardly she was thinking: "Why couldn't I make a considerable sum of money out of this? Take the whole thing in my hands, and get a still commission? Times are changing. I could charge her at least $15,000 for my list of friends and for chaperoning the young daughter! If 'Toddy' marries her, I'd insist on a large settlement for him."

poor darling! Only how ever could he, or I, or his father swallow that dreadful mother?"

It was a somewhat crestfallen "Toddy" Van Tyle who arrived at the Tyson apartment that evening. He brought no flowers. Stupid to spend his money, or commit himself, until he saw how the land lay. His mother's account of the girl's mother had been quite appalling. Imagine his further chagrin, then, when he learned from Mrs. Tyson herself—replendent in orchid satin drawn so tightly on her stout figure that the line of her corset clearly showed—that she was accompanying them. . . .

Too well-bred to show his discomfort, he quickly racked his brains for a suitable spot to take them to, to dine and spend the evening? The smart hotels and night clubs were unthinkable. His friends would raze him to death about the old girl, and it might look as though he were "committed," matrimonially speaking, to the daughter, with the mother in the party!

"Would you enjoy a little whirl at the tables, Mrs. Tyson?" he asked deferentially. "The old Stuyvesant Breckenridge mansion in the East Eighties has been turned into a first-class gambling house. I often go there."

Now—next to her urge for Society—Sadie Tyson loved any kind of a gamble, and the turn of a wheel. She accepted gladly. Any place that he selected for them would be "okay by me," she told "Toddy" gushingly.

"You didn't bring your car with you? And I let Jake use ours to-night! We've the sweetest imported 11-spanny-squeezer you ever laid your eyes on—though I'll bet you've laid eyes on the best cars in the world, Mr. Van Tyle?" she said affably as the commissionaire of the hotel signalled a taxicab.

They got inside and "Toddy" gave the address of the mysterious house in the East Eighties. Sadie made him sit between Vernon and herself in the back seat, though with her plumpness it was a tight squeeze. She congratulated herself that Vernon was looking beautiful tonight in a Chanel model of pale pink velvet. "My daughter, Mrs. Toddybrock Van Tyle" . . . how elegant that sounded! And there was every chance of it, apparently!

Of course that horrible Martina de Bray . . . or rather the Metchaeva woman . . . had let her down over the guests invited for Vernon's coming-out party one week from tonight. But between now and then many things might happen. Mrs. Van Tyle would come to their help. Vernon was saying to herself: "I've given Ariene the address of this gambling joint. If Terry telephones, he's to come on here. Some things tell me that tonight I will see him . . ."

She was correct in that. But little did she seek under what circumstances!

Dinner was rather a stupid affair. They had champagne. "Toddy" had whispered a timely word about the Tysons' wealth in the proprietor's ear.

But Vernon thought: "Champagne doesn't really exhilarate one unless one is in interesting company." That meant Terry, of course. Certain intuition told her that tonight, no matter how late, she would see Terry.

After dinner, she and her mother and Toddy played baccarat.

Vernon lost. She was $300 out when she rose from the table.

"Unlucky at cards, lucky in love!" She felt calm and cheerful and quietly anticipatory, somehow.

Her mother and "Toddy" Van Tyle had formed a partnership. That had been his suggestion. They would split their winnings or losses.

Vernon wandered off into a quiet nook in the big, roomy old mansion and found an interesting book to read.

The book gradually slipped from her fingers to the floor. Her eyes closed. She was emotionally tired. She slumbered.

She had a wonderful dream . . . that Terry Shannon knelt before her . . . that Terry told her that he loved her. . . .

She awoke suddenly. Was it still a dream? Terry in the flesh stood before her!

"I phoned your apartment. The maid told me you'd come here. I followed at once to take you right out of this, Vernon."

She blinked at him. She smiled sleepily. She said: "I knew you'd come, Terry."

But Terry didn't smile. He said brusquely: "You've no business to be here. Of all things, you have to pick the night when the police are going to raid the place!"

"I laid this place for my wonderful dream that had now changed to a dear reality. She stared up at Terry.

"Because gambling happens to be illegal in New York, and there are other counts against this house as well. I've just warned your mother. She's lost $1500. She insists on writing her check for the amount. She's getting on her wraps now."

"And what about 'Foggy' 'Toddy'—what's his name? Where's he?"

Terry said sharply: "He can take care of himself, but it seems you can't, you silly little thing! I'm in command now. Get your coat, and you and your mother and I will be off while the going's good!"

They went down to the main floor where Sadie Tyson, considerably disconcerted, joined them. It was unlikely that the boy "Toddy" would pay any of the loss. He had pointed out, in his well-bred, superior way, that it was entirely her own fault. And after all, $1500 was a tidy sum to part with!

She beavalled all this to Terry Shannon in a loud voice.

"Mother, let's go. Mr. Shannon came all the way here to get us out before the police raid the place," Vernon whispered to her mother.

"And how did Mr. Shannon know that we were here?" Sadie gave them both a sharp look.

"Never mind now, darling. It's dangerous to waste time. Let's hurry."

"What's all this stupid nonsense about a raid? How could Mr. Shannon know about it unless he's in cahoots with the police?"

Irritated as he was, Terry couldn't help smiling at that. She was so like a ruffled little pouter pigeon!

HIBERNIANS WIN SECOND OF THE PLAY-OFF SERIES

The Bristol Twilight League playoff series went in a deadlock at 2-all Saturday when the Hibernians trimmed the Odd Fellows for the second consecutive week. Final score was 10-3, with the game being played on Landreth's field. The date for the deciding tilt has not been set as yet.

"Eddie" Sullivan again mastered the trick for the Hibs. His twirling stood out in the contest even though he was socked for nine safe blows. Eddie was very effective in the pinches and to top off his performance he smacked out a home run in the final frame for one of the largest Twilight league hits of the season.

"Al" Eastlack also stood in the spotlight when he connected with a Minster pitch in the last canto and sent it screaming into centerfield for a four-bagger with two runners on the sacks. Dave Ennis had a double and two singles while Punkie Zeffries smacked out two doubles.

Fred Hibbs led the losers with the stick, having a pair of two-baggers and a single in four official trips to the platter.

LANDRETHS SEEDS LOSE TO PLEASANTVILLE NINE

Landreth Seeds lost a close game to the Pleasantville team of the Philadelphia League yesterday afternoon 4-3. Ashby pitching for the "Farmers" pitched really better than the score would indicate, and although he allowed ten hits not one of the runs were earned.

Cielesz, who scored for the visitors in the first inning after making a single, was out at second on an attempt to steal, but he came into Malmbsbury so hard that he knocked the ball from his hand and was safe. After the next two batters fled out he scored on Wilson's hit along the third base line. In the third inning Peters fanned, Malmbsbury dropped Cielesz' pop fly, on the hit and run Wooley hit between first and second and Cielesz pulled up at third, Cummings scored him on a fly to Pursell. The visitors won the game in the seventh. Thiel singled to left field and scored when Bauman's fly to centre field was lost in the sun by Roe and the runner made three bases. Dougherty and Hill both did some clever fielding to hold Bauman at third as the next two batters grounded out. Wooley finally hit through the centre of the diamond to score Bauman.

Barrett was thrown out at home in the Seeds' first inning. Safe on Bauman's error, he advanced on a sacrifice by Malmbsbury and attempted to score on Dougherty's hit to centre but was cut down on Cummings' throw. Dougherty advanced to second and counted when Hill hit safely to left field.

A hit by Malmbsbury in the third and Pursell's three-base hit to right field, registered the "Farmers'" second tally. Consecutive three base hits by Dougherty and Pursell scored the third run in fifth frame giving the home team the lead which they held till the seventh.

Roe and Pursell made several good catches in the outfield. Dougherty's infield play was the best seen on a local diamond this season. Miller covered lots of ground at short for Pleasantville.

TEN ALL-STAR BOUTS BOOKED HERE TONIGHT

St. Ann's arena, Wood and Franklin streets, will be the scene of ten all-star bouts tonight as the St. Ann's Athletic Association conducts another of its bi-monthly amateur boxing shows. The bouts have been matched by Patsy Moffo and are sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic District of the A. A. U.

Fighting in the wind-up will be two of the best 126-pounders in the amateur ranks in Vince Delia, the southpaw local boy, and Happy Riddle, Sun Village, Chester. Riddle is ranked high in the amateur circles and if Delia is successful in going over this hurdle he will be seeded high in the coming Golden Glove tournament.

In the semi-windup, Moffo has arranged for Benny Arizzi, unattached, to fight Karl Schmead, two-fisted boy from the Nativty Club, who has won six straight bouts. Schmead is the cool and collective sort of fighter, and uses science to gain many of his wins, while Arizzi is just the opposite, swings from bell to bell and never aims.

The local patrons will also see the return of Tommy Brown, Shackamaxton, to the local squared circle. Brown has been off for quite some time but has been training and appears in fine condition for his comeback trial. His foe will be Johnny Hurbez, Sun Village. Ed Frommo and his brother Jack are also listed in the program. These Sun Village mittmen will fight Al Davis and Jim Ambrogo, respectively, both of Sun Village. The Frommo brothers are both well known in the amateur game, and boast of long lists of victories.

In other bouts, Nathaniel Hines, Arena, meets Cirbino, Sun Village; Pete Ward, Sun Village, tackles Johnny Quigley, Germantown Boys' Club; and Johnny Hasefras, Germantown Boys' Club, fights John Ellitto, Sun Village.

There is also a possibility that Tally Sciarras, St. Ann's, may meet Mike O'Brien, Arena.

First bout goes on at 8.30 o'clock, sharp.

BRISTOL A. A. DEFEATS STRONG TURNER NINE

The Bristol A. A. kept up their winning streak on Sunday when they defeated the strong Phila. Turners by the score of 9 to 2. Zeffries was on the hill for Mulholland's clan and he toyed with the Turners and was given perfect support. Breslin hit a home run in the fourth, the longest drive on the Turner field this year. This makes 20 wins, 6 losses, 1 tie and probably will play Kensington, champions Phila. League, next Sunday at Philadelphia.

yard line. After an exchange of punts Orazi again fumbled a kick and as before a Gray lineman pounced on the ball on the Red 25 yard line. Johnson slipped through tackle for 7 yards; then Collier scampered down the middle to the 3 yard line before he was downed. On the next play he plunged through the Red line to cross the last marker for the second tally. Again they failed to add the extra point. This time it was the air route that failed.

The losers muffed their only chance to score as the third period ended. Palumbo intercepted another pass thrown by Barouth only to fumble it. The ball was recovered by a Red lineman to give them a first down deep in the Gray's territory. On the next play a pass, Barouth to Louder, netted five yards and put the ball on the 3 yard line as the quarter ended. Then the line-ups changed for the final stanza. The substitutes proceeded to lose five yards and the ball and their only op-

POISON—THEY SAID "LITTLE POISON" WOULD NEVER PLAY AGAIN WHEN A SEVERE ATTACK OF PNEUMONIA KEPT HIM OUT OF ACTION IN 1935. BUT HE BACK!

Little Lloyd Warner's comeback this season with the Pittsburgh Pirates is another story of the triumph of courage over adversity.

The smaller and younger of the Polson twins was on the shelf all last year, seriously ill with pneumonia. Dangerous lung complications developed, and for a while doctors feared for the frail little fellow's life. Peevee has a heart bigger than his slight frame, however, and he has not only fought his way back to health, but is again cavorting in the Pirate outfield as sprightly as ever, though last year it was said he would never play baseball again.

A somewhat similar saga is the tennis tale of Miss Alice Marble's return. The blonde Coast star was struck down in 1934 by an attack of pleurisy while she was campaigning in Europe with the Wightman Cup team. Out of competition for two years because of this serious illness, Alice was not even considered for the Wightman team this spring, though she protested that she had fully recovered.

Determined to prove that she was as good as ever, Miss Marble returned to action in Eastern tournaments, and scored some notable wins last month. During the course of the Nationals at Forest Hills, Alice has shown more speed and severity in her shots than she ever displayed before her unfortunate illness.

portunity to score. Spencer punted out of danger to end the threat.

They hadn't lost hope, however, for the fought back desperately in an effort to score. Hutch intercepted a Gray pass on the latter's 44 yard line. A clipping penalty was inflicted on the Gray team which gave the Reds a first

By virtue of their victory the Grays not only upset the dope but they were the first team to score more than one touchdown since the series started four years ago.

However, final statistics show that the Reds outplayed the Grays in every department. On the other hand, the Grays took advantage of the breaks and made them count. They played for everything, forced the breaks, and deserved to win.

In looking over the statistics we find the Reds made five first downs to two for the Grays. They completed six out of 14 passes for 48 yards and one five-yard loss. The winners only attempted two passes, completing one for 25 yards, the other being intercepted; while they intercepted three opponents' arials.

Both sides fumbled twice with the Grays recovering one of their own for a ten-yard loss, while the Reds recovered the other. The two Red fumbles were both recovered by the Grays.

The Red team received a setback four times for a total of 26 yards, with the Grays being thrown for a loss on four occasions also, for a total of 21 yards.

Each side booted the oval eight times. The Red team returned the Gray boots for a total of 30 yards; while the Gray team could only return Red kicks for ten yards.

The Gray team had six penalties inflicted upon them for a total loss of 60 yards. At the same time the Red team lost only ten yards for a violation.

Since the Gray team kicked off each time they didn't have the opportunity to show what they could do in returning such a kick. The Reds on the other hand did, and they certainly showed they could return them. They received on four occasions and ran the kicks back for a total of 77 yards for an average of 19 yards. Harry Barouth led in this respect with two run-backs of 27 and 20 yards respectively, while Danny DiMidio ran the opening kick-off back 25 yards and Tony Orazi ran one back for 5 yards.

Only two of the 15 passes attempted netted more than 10 yards. One thrown by Spencer to Wollard was good for 25 yards for the Gray team. The Reds completed a 20-yard pass, Barouth to Deuca when interference was declared on the play.

Probably the most outstanding individual on either team was Marvin Hutchinson of the Red team. He was given this distinction because of his all-around ability. Hutch punted, passed, ran, tackled, blocked, received passes, and intercepted arials with equal skill.

The most noticeable mistakes were the fundamentals, particularly blocking and handling the ball. These will be drilled on next week in signal practice.
